RN TO CIA LIBRARY

1. The airfield south of NOVAYA LADOGA (32°19'N/60°07'E), Leningrad MD, directly east of the Volkhov River, was about 10,000 feet square. Most of the southern third of the field was covered with woods where EM bunkers for four to six men each were located. A firm road led to the town.
2. For data on installations see Annex.
3. The hangar was empty. The four-story barracks building, 50x130x180 feet, has been occupied by a naval unit of from 400 to 500 men since the Spring of 1948.
4. The airfield had been occupied by Soviet Air Force troops up to the Fall of 1946.

 Comment:

a. Previous information (December 1947) reported on the reconstruction of the field and its occupation by single and multiple-engine aircraft.

b. This report confirms that the relatively large airfield is serviceable and was only occupied until late 1946. Further reports are required to clarify the condition and occupation of the field.

c. According to previous records, a runway was in the eastern section of the field.
